

Oral history is a critical tool for honoring and remembering the wealth of lives and experiences that surround us.

Through preserving and sharing the stories of individuals, we shape a more nuanced and humane understanding of society; we round out our collective narrative and interpretation of history.

As a company based in the US/Mexico borderlands, we are deeply engaged in the stories of border residents. Lives lived on the border are a reflection of history as it unfolds and the individuals who live here bear witness day to day to the geopolitical affairs that shape the course of human events.

Unfortunately, not every border resident is in a position to commission a legacy memoir video. That is why we have started the Borderlands Stories Preservation Project. With your help we can offer pro-bono memoir creation services to low income individuals who fit our selection criteria of having spent over 25 years residing in the US/Mexico borderlands.

You can donate to this oral history preservation project by visiting: paypal.me/desertmemoirs
Please include a note indicating that your donation is intended for the Borderlands Stories Preservation Project.

With your support we can connect, listen and share the human stories of the borderlands. Together we can create compassion, understanding and historical memory one legacy at a time.
